Dear Friends,

I do not believe that one can even come close to a realization of the real fear, fright and horror that is combat. In addition to the emotional and psychological reality that is the weight of combat there is also the incredible physical stress and constant discomfort!

It is a good thing that most people will never have to personally come to a realization of these things – but – from the standpoint of America's current day-to-day frame-of-mind regarding the Wars in which our military are presently engaged in.

However, I believe it would be better for our troops and better for those on the Home-Front" if they were able to have a tighter, more sensitively-real, feel for what our young sons and daughters actually endure – while in combat and after they return home!

I believe that something as rudimentary as "logistics" is detrimental in people here at home being capable of understand the true value of what is being done on their behalf.

This enemy that we fight in these distant places is only being fought there – because this evil enemy cannot "YET" reach your neighborhood!

I cannot help to be caused to think that the sincere appreciation and realization for each and every one of our young soldiers would be different – if they were standing on "your" front lawn, in front of "your" house firing their weapons at an enemy that wanted to be in your house KILLING "you!" – instead of where they are now, in front of some bombed-out building in Iraq.

The reality; the need; the absolute seriousness, of what and why are military is doing 24 hours a day and 7 days a week is so crucial to our continuing comfort, safety and security – but it is sometimes difficult to put into a real and proper perspective – because of how well these young soldiers are doing their jobs!

Thanks,

Robert
