

"There Are Laws!"

Freedumb In America Today

Dear Friends,

"There are laws" – but, there is also a bold culture growing within government and its bureaucracies that more and more frequently – feel no need pay no heed to the "LAW!"

How can this be? How can these "Liberal-Left Ruling-Class Elite Statist" just do what they want – with NO regard for the, Law?

They can and do – because fewer and fewer people are calling them to accountability and are insisting that they must obey the law!

The first problem of course is the general, "Ignorance-at-large" of "We the People." If there is a law for the benefit of protecting the "People" from an abusive and intrusive government and their little minion bureaucrats – BUT – the "People" are ignorant of those laws to protect them and reign-in government scoundrels – then it is just like NOT having the law! ...and these government/bureaucrat scoundrels know that.

This is where it becomes the DUTY of every law-abiding American citizen to FIRST: "Know" the LAWS and, SECOND: Demand "enforcement" of those LAWS!

Did you know? The local County Sheriff is the "Chief Law-enforcement" and supersedes even Federal encroachment into his jurisdiction!

Please read the attached article and then determine – as an American Christian citizen – should you KNOW about these important law-enforcement chain of command?

Does "your" county Sheriff know about the fundamental "Law-Enforcement Power" that resides within his official office – and – is he willing to use that power to defend and protect his County citizens from the illegal intrusion and abuse of a power-hungry government and its bureaucracies?

Perhaps it is "YOUR" responsibility to actually call him and ask him???

Local sheriff defends farmer from FDA intrusion

by Joel McDurmon on Dec 8, 2011

Brad Rogers, Sheriff of Elkhart County, Indiana, is withstanding FDA bureaucrats who are harassing citizens in his county. The Complete Patient reports,

The U.S. Justice Department has withdrawn its subpoena of Indiana raw dairy farmer Richard Hochstetler to appear before a federal grand jury.

He was scheduled to testify tomorrow in Detroit, in connection with an outbreak of illnesses linked by public health officials, including the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, to the milk of his Forest Grove Dairy. But yesterday he received a certified letter saying that his subpoena was being withdrawn.

The withdrawal came after Roger's Sheriff's Department told the FDA to back off:

He wrote two letters to the Justice Department warning it not to conduct inspections of Hochstetler's farm without a warrant from a local judge. In the process, he got into a debate over the limits of federal power and the U.S. Constitution with the Justice Department's Goldstein.

Earlier this month, Rogers emailed Goldstein that there had been "a number of inspections and attempted inspections on (Hochstetler's) farm..." He warned that "any further attempts to inspect this farm without a warrant signed by a local judge, based on probable cause, will result in Federal inspectors' removal or arrest for trespassing by my officers or I."

Finding itself losing battles on local food control lately, the FDA has been itching to make a public example of someone, and it appears Hochstetler is such a target. Yet its allegations of illness fly in the face of the evidence as "extensive testing of Hochstetler's milk in 2010 had shown no signs of campylobacter." Nevertheless, "FDA officials had targeted Hochstetler and another farmer, Richard Hebron, of Family Farms Co-op, in meetings in 2009." It's clear the FDA is just trying to create a publicity case—a not-uncommon tactic in Federal history.

But now not only its evidence but its tactics are being withstood. A Kentucky Food Freedom blog explains the inspiration behind men like Rogers:

Sheriff Brad Rogers is member of the County Sheriff Project, a project that Richard Mack (one of the five Sheriffs that stood against the Brady Bill) and others began as an effort to educate its members on their oath to uphold the Constitution and stand up for the citizens against federal tyranny.

Elkhart County Sheriff Brad Rogers was well informed on the rights of his citizens and took action to protect them against the overreaching arms of the DOJ, the FDA, and the USDA.

When asked about the legal attacks, the Amish Hochstetler responded in faith: “I never got too excited about it. It is spiritual warfare between good and evil and if we have God on our side, we will win.”

Having God on your side means having His righteous law on your side, and it’s good to have a local sheriff with the knowledge and courage to stand against unnecessary Federal intrusions into their local jurisdictions. If we are to restore freedom in America, it must begin with God, and it must begin locally. For more on restoring local sovereignty, read here.

For those farmers already tied up in the court process, there is the Farm-to-Consumer Legal Defense Fund ready to help. Check to see how your state views raw milk sales and learn what you can do to further the cause of food freedom.
