What Poor Man Ever Hired Anyone???

David Hicks - 8/17/2011 10:44 AM

This is a legitimate question! Name one!

I am not wealthy by any attempted definition. Whatever I have earned in my lifetime, would not have been achieved unless a sound fiscal company existed that I could work for.

As I climbed the ladder, it became very clear that the more viable the company remained the more security I had, and greater the hope of earned advancement.

Some say the era of conscience in business is gone! Company's no longer reinvest in the growth of the company. They get in, get what they can, then get out. There may be some truth to this; however, I would ask "Is this due to tried business practices being neglected, or because of government intervention, that is telling American companies that one dollar is too much profit?"

My dear friends,

It does not take a genius to see that big government is set to destroy free enterprise in order to secure itself as the greatest employer (socialism!). There can be little doubt that companies in the interim cannot invest in the company (waiting for decisions on mandated health care, new tax laws, new green laws, etc...). What is left to them? Get in, get what they can, get out!!!

Where is the security for employees? Where are the future jobs? Where is the advancement (benefits to middle class, via hand up, not hand out!)? Instead; we have a generation of government dependents who rely on social engineers for their future (what liberty?). Is this the America you want your kids or grand kids to live in?

It is not enough to remove this sitting president in the next election; it is much more critical that we remove any supporter of sizable government. This includes the wishy-washy conservatives who are content in the system!!!

There needs to be a great awakening! It is time to restore this nation to its original roots, before it is too late. No one content in the present system and size of government can remain.

What can you do?

1. Continue to educate yourself on the truth of the founding of this nation.
2. Band together with those who also see the great need for the awakening!
3. Vote, vote, vote. Write-in candidates, if the ones on your ballots do not represent your values. The greatest mark you can make, is when a candidate losses an election because you had to write in a vote, instead of casting your vote for them. They will have to start paying attention to you!
4. Financially support small government, morally sound groups that use these dollars to educate the masses.
5. Do not lose heart; fight, scream, and then become more determined to act. Look in the faces of your kids and grandkids for motivation.

We have to put into office, those who will reduce the size of government and allow companies to reinvest in themselves. To create an environment where companies will come back to America, stay and invest in the future.

Freedumb in America Today – wants you to stand shoulder to shoulder with us in this fight and the one to restore our Christian roots. May God bless us all in Christ Jesus our King!

David
