

Lighthouse in the Fog – A Country Gone Mad!

<http://www.freedumbinamericatoday.com/index.html>

Lighthouse in the Fog

By: David Hicks - November 3, 2011

A Country Gone Mad!

How dare congress waste time passing a law that demands that we know that our national motto is “In God We Trust”? This was our complainer in chief’s attitude and words’ concerning the first majority action congress has been able to enjoin in forever. Could it be that it was his doing? You bet it was! He was the one who went to Jakarta (wherever that is?), last year and state that our national motto was “E Pluribus Unum” – out of many, one! Madness!

Then to complain about congress doing this, instead of working on a jobs bill that “we need to pass now!” A bill, that we cannot forget, wants the government to spend another half a trillion dollars, while the super committee is toiling tirelessly to cut over a trillion in spending (I just gagged a little).

I know this is a side note, but can you imagine the founding fathers looking at this super committee today and thinking why did we draft two Senators per state and a representative congress, when could just have set up a super committee! Yeah right! Madness!

Oh yeah! Because we also have another half a trillion handy; opps! I must be thinking of our lender, China. Madness!

However, I guess it is ok to play golf, travel to Europe, or campaign. To literally be too busy to just remove those one thousand tentacles that he has through all the government regulation, that would allow industry to come to the United States and be globally competitive. Madness!

You know, we compare education with the rest of the world (and we are failing there also); yet, in all this talk about creating jobs, no one is talking about the additional costs added to companies in the United States comparatively. Even our spender, complainer in chief’s job czar has taken jobs away from American soil, to do business in China's business friendly climate; and all those Chinese being put to work have not said a word about all the money being paid to their CEO??? Occupy that??? Madness!

Jobs? When did we stop thinking of jobs as a byproduct of the growth of business? Oh yeah! When government became the chief employer! Government does not make anything, it does not grow any crops, it does not build any tractors (although it tried to build cars, and run the banks and that worked out so well!); it just makes it harder for all of these productive businesses to do what they do best, and to hire good people to help them do it. Madness!

In addition, because all those government jobs produce absolutely nothing but bureaucracy, the employees have to be paid more than the private sector jobs they destroy and receive benefit packages that allow them to retire younger and live well off the public dime, all the while removing businesses ability to hire the ones that pay their salaries (can anyone say – Greece?). Madness!

Instead of thinking in terms of how intelligent a candidate is, or how well he debates, there supposed constitutional knowledge, how well they look on “The View”, or any other of the nonsensical methods by which we choose out these absolute worthless presidents, congressmen or women, or senators, why don't we try find just one with common sense? Madness!

What a novel concept! A president that would say, “Hey, we can't spend it, until we have paid for what we have already spent!”
Or, “Wow! How do you guys do any business at all, when you have to spend millions on all these signs that we made you put up to tell your employees how lucky they are to be employed in America?”
Or, “Why don't we just let the men and women the American people selected to steer the ship – do just that. We really don't need these czars; let's save the people some money and bureaucracy, and actually force these folks to earn their checks!”
Or most important of all, “Is this best for God and country?” Much, much madness!

I'll tell you why! The American people have lost their minds! They can tell you what is on prime time TV tonight, how many TD's Tebow had last weekend, but spend five minutes to really look into the madness that has become our government, forget about it!!! Madness!

So, yes! Our leaders have to pass a law to tell us what our national motto is, because we are so stupid, we actually have to be told (from the top down!). Yes, this is the only thing that can get by-partisan support and a majority in congress behind!

That is actually the most surprising thing in all the madness! The last tallies show that this is still supposed to be a Christian nation???
Massive madness!

Do you now understand why morality, family, and God have taken a back seat to the X-Factor?

Why the instruction of the Apostles of our Lord, that, “If a man does not work, he should not eat” has become, “Why work, when the government will give me unemployment for doing nothing!”

Don’t shake your head as if you know it but can’t do anything about it! That is exactly what has caused it! People who have known better; yet, have stood by voiceless, silent, and submitting to the folly willingly. Shame on us all!

The blood of all those who have died to provide us the soft whinny existence, screams in defiance of our enactive, fat, lazy butts. Tragic madness!

So, when the next four years comes, and we find ourselves taxed into oblivion, with unemployment rampant, and government employees striking because we can’t pay their massive entitlements; just turn on the TV (that you will only be able to watch for one or two hours because of power allocations), and watch the newest reality show, “Selling Your Kids Future”. Truthful madness!

Madness!

David

Volume 1, Issue 19